

ABSTRACT

A semiconductor device includes a semiconductor chip, an external connection electrode connected to the chip and a resin package for covering the chip. The resin package includes a mounting surface which faces a supporting substrate. The electrode includes a thick portion and a thin portion. The thick portion is partially exposed to the outside at the mounting surface of the package.